Providing to all clients a high standard of professional competence, prompt and personal service, and a practical approach to their needs.

Macphillamy Cummins & Gibson is one of the largest general law practices in Canberra. Its origins date back to the 1930s, when Canberra was a national Capital in its infancy.

It now serves clients in all states and territories of Australia and overseas. While maintaining a strong client base in the Canberra community, our firm also acts for major national corporations and large government sector clients.

Macphillamy Cummins & Gibson is a member of the Australian Legal Group, a federation of some of Australia's oldest, largest and most eminent law firms, all of which reap the benefits of a commitment to national and international practice through the federation, combined with an ability to continue to operate as independent firms.

Through the Australian Legal Group, our firm is able to offer its clients access not only to the services of its colleagues in each mainland State capital but also the Gold Coast, London, New York, Singapore, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Tokyo and Taipei.

Macphillamy Cummins & Gibson regards each of its clients as singularly important. Over the years this philosophy has engendered strong loyalty to our firm. As a result, clients range from individuals who require assistance with their family or personal affairs through to both small and large business enterprises and corporations with local, national and international operations.

Quality and service are the measures by which our firm wishes to be judged - equally important to all clients, irrespective of size. For more information please contact the General Manager, Sandra Green, or any of the people named below

Notice of the injury must be given to the employer, as soon as practicable after the injury has happened and before the worker has voluntarily left the employment in which the employee was injured.

The notice must be in writing. If there is more than one employer, the notice may be given to one of those employers.

The notice shall specify the name and address of the person injured and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the date on which the injury happened.

The notice may be served by delivering it to or sending it by security post (certified mail) to the residence or place of business of the person on whom it is to be served. If the employer is a body of persons it may also be served by delivering it to or by sending it by security post (certified mail) to the office or any of the offices of the body.

Claim for Compensation

If compensation is claimed for an injury, the claim must be made within 6 months after the injury happened or, in the case of death, within 6 months of death. However the failure to make a claim within 6 months after injury or death is not a bar to the recovery of compensation if the failure was occasioned by mistake, or other reasonable cause. If compensation is claimed for a disease it should be made on the current employer or the employer whose employment you consider was responsible for your disease. In these cases the 6 months limit may not apply.

A claim for compensation must be in writing and be delivered or sent by security post (certified mail) to the employer. Claim forms are available from the employer on request and are free of charge. Medical evidence should be forwarded with the completed claim form.

The employer can require an employee to attend a medical examination by a medical person of the employer's choice before payments of workers compensation are made. If the employee refuses to attend the examination or obstructs it in any way the right to compensation may be affected.

Workers Right to Information

The Act provides that an employee must be provided on request with the name and address of the insurance company who insures the employer for workers compensation. If the employer is an exempt employer at the time of the request the employee should be notified of that information.

Cost of Treatment

If the employee receives medical treatment for an injury and wishes to recover the cost of that treatment, notice and details of the treatment must be given to the employer without undue delay.
